DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

1 Plaintiff LORRAINE WELLS, et al, complains and pleads as follows:

2 GENERAL ALLEGATIONS

3 1. At all relevant times, Plaintiffs LORRAINE WELLS, LISA CORDOVA-BAGLEY, 4 ANDREA TUNG, RON HARPOLE, RICHARD KEMP, and BRANDON CRAIG ("Plaintiffs"), 5 lived and/or worked at the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, in the County of Alameda, 6 State of California.

7 2. At all relevant times, Defendant REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF 8 CALIFORNIA ("Defendants" or "UC Regents") was and now is a public entity organized and 9 existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business located at 10 1111 Franklin Street, 12th Floor, Oakland, CA 94607. UC Regents operates, manages, and/or owns 11 the Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory, and thereby employs the people that work there.

12 3. At all relevant times, Defendant DIANE HUTCHINSON ("Hutchinson") was and 13 now is an individual residing in, or working in, the County of Alameda, State of California, and 14 committed actions within, and outside the scope of her job duties and employment at the Lawrence 15 Berkeley National Laboratory.

16 4. Plaintiffs are informed and believe and based thereon alleges that each Defendant 17 was the agent and employee of its Co-Defendants, and in doing some of the things alleged in this 18 Complaint was acting within the course and scope of that agency and employment.

19 5. The true names and capacities of Defendants sued herein as Does 1 through 100, 20 inclusive, are unknown to Plaintiff, but Plaintiff will amend this Complaint when and if the true 21 names of said Defendants become known to them. Plaintiffs are informed and believe and based 22 thereon allege that each of the Defendants sued herein as a Doe is responsible in some manner for 23 the events and happenings herein set forth and proximately caused injury and damages, and any 24 reference to "Defendant" shall mean "Defendant and each of them."

25 BACKGROUND

26 6. Numerous Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory ("Lab") employees can and will 27 provide declarations, deposition testimony, and trial testimony, establishing that the new regime 28 under Kim Williams enacted practices and procedures intended to harass employees that were over

1 the age of 40 and/or at enjoying enough years of service to reach certain levels of vesting in their 2 pensions. Kim Williams and Becky Cornett acted with the intent to harass Plaintiffs and force 3 them to quit. They also acted with the intent of building a case for termination against these 4 employees, and in some instances, forced employees to resign in response to the threat of 5 termination. To the extent that these practices and policies included conduct that was not 6 intentional, such conduct is still actionable under the ADEA, and had a disparate impact under 7 Title VII and FEHA.

8       7.     Lab employees can provide admissible evidence establishing that the conduct of 9 Williams, Cornett, and their mid-level managers, was willful, extreme and outrageous, and outside 10 of the ambit of the Worker's Compensation Act. Indeed, in addition to being extreme and 11 outrageous, some employees were targeted with considerations of their age and race fueling the 12 managers' attacks and harmful conduct.

13       8.     Moreover, these managers – seemingly at Williams's direction – engaged in a 14 conspiracy to terrorize the employees that they wanted to get rid of. They colluded in managers' 15 meetings, they discussed their plans in person as well as emails, they applauded when they 16 accomplished certain aspects of their mission, and they sought to punish anyone that broke rank 17 and deviated from their master plan.

18       9.     Accordingly, Plaintiffs' have claims for Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress 19 and age-based harassment. Plaintiff Lorraine Wells has race-based claims under the same federal 20 and state statutes. Plaintiffs also have claims under C.A. v. William S. Hart Union High School
Dist. (2012) 53 Cal.4th 861, for negligent training and supervision. Lastly, the Plaintiffs that are 22 former employees have claims under the 5th and 14th Amendments for deprivation of procedural 23 due process, and fraudulent inducement to enter contract (Terry Pierre).

24       10.    UC Regents and its pension problems became a well-told story during the recent 25 economic downturn. The Regents's contribution to the pension system increased to 14%. And 26 then it returned to requiring significant contributions for its employees. Even still, the funding 27 shortfall was enormous. UC Regents borrowed billions of dollars, including a recent $700 million 28 loan.

1       11.     Last year, UC Retirement had only 76 percent of the actuarially projected assets 2 needed to pay pension obligations over the next three decades. So in addition to being incapable of 3 satisfying its pension obligations to the hard working employees that had already served their time
 4 and become completely vested, the Regents had the growing problem of dealing with current 5 employees that would be vesting and eligible for retirement in the upcoming years.

6       12.     The Lab's pension and lifetime benefits system is tiered. Many of the employees
 7 under the OCFO are subject to a vesting schedule that requires 10 years of service to earn 50% 8 lifetime medical, and 20 years of service to earn 100% lifetime medical. Given the existing 9 inability to pay its current pension obligations, the Regents's problems were increasing every day 10 an employee vested and grew closer to retirement. Therefore, the only control the Regents had to 11 solve its problem was to reduce the number of employees that would vest and/or reach retirement 12 while employed for the Regents.

13       13.     After borrowing billions of dollars to bridge the pension funding gap, and as the 14 economy began to recover, the Lab hired Kim Williams as the CFO of the Office of the CFO for 15 Procurement and Property ("OCFO"). Kim Williams, in concert with her direct report Becky 16 Cornett, devised a plan to reduce the number of older employees, and vesting employees, in the 17 department. This plan, in their minds, served several purposes: (1) the department could hire new 18 employees that could possibly retire with less years of service and therefore drain less of the 19 pension's resources; (2) they could hire new employees for less than six months and then terminate 20 them before they became permanent employees (this was especially true for employees that were 21 newly hired and over 40); and (3) this plan also enabled them to hire managers that would act in 22 furtherance of their scheme and remain loyal to their mission.

23       14.     Williams and Cornett were not focused only on cleansing part of their department of 24 older and more tenured employees. They were also focused on power and control. They executed 25 both plans in a manner that struck fear in the Lab employees, and created frustration and 26 resentment. These emotions multiplied as Lab employees learned that there was no place for them 27 to turn to for help, support, or protection, because Human Resources ignored complaints and even 28 reported them to Williams and Cornett.

1       15. As a part of their master plan, Williams and Cornett controlled the Human 2 Resources process and function so that employees that complained met dead ends and ultimately 3 faced the reality that Williams was in control and calling the shots. Rainey Wells's experience is a 4 perfect example of this well-played scheme.

5       16. Fortunately for Wells and her peers, there were two managers in the OCFO named 6 Gary Mack ("Mack") and Richard Kemp ("Kemp"). These managers reported to Becky Cornett, 7 and they were peers to Diane Hutchinson, Laura Crosby, Colleen Lewis, and Edna Annis.

8       17. Mack and Kemp sat in the same meetings as Cornett's other direct reports, and they 9 received the same instructions from Cornett with respect to Williams's and Cornett's scheme to 10 force older and longer-tenured employees to quit. This process is sometimes referred to as 11 "managing out" employees.

12       18. Craig Hopkins is a Lab employee over 40 years old that reported to Mack. Hopkins, 13 like the other Plaintiffs, worked for the Lab long enough to vest his pension, but not long enough to 14 reach his next vesting level or age of retirement. Mack, as Hopkins's manager, received orders 15 from Cornett to push Hopkins out by overloading him with work, refusing to provide him with 16 training, giving him unfair performance reviews, refusing to approve him for raises, and taking 17 other steps to make Hopkins's life miserable so that he would quit.

18       19. In an act of heroism, Mack had the character and gumption to refuse to go along 19 with Cornett's orders. Mack asked why Hopkins could not be trained like other newer employees 20 that did not have enough years of service to vest in their pensions. Mack told Cornett and his peers 21 that he refused to mistreat Hopkins and play their games. Mack resigned from his position because 22 he did not want to work in an environment where managers were intentionally harassing older 23 employees so that they would quit. Mack was also fed up with the hostility he experienced from 24 OCFO management for speaking up and protecting Hopkins.

25       20. After Mack resigned, Kemp followed. But before Kemp resigned, he exposed the 26 Williams/Cornett conspiracy by reporting their misconduct to the Lab's whistleblower program, as 27 well as confirming for specific employees that the Lab was targeting them and intentionally 28 harassing them.

1       21. For example, Kemp drafted a multi-page email to several employees describing how 2 Lab managers discussed methods for harassing older Lab employees.

3       22. Kemp sent this email before he left the Lab, but after he started to experience 4 tension, ostracism, and coldness following his attempts to rectify the indignities experienced by 5 Lab employees at the hands of Williams and Cornett.

6       23. Kemp did not initially understand what Cornett was up to when he began working at 7 the Lab. In fact, in response to concerns raised by Williams regarding pension costs, he had 8 presented her with a strategic plan requiring the targeting and intentional hiring of employees that 9 were under 40 and less experienced. Kemp will confirm that Williams and Cornett absolutely 10 loved his plan and found ways to implement it.

11       24. Kemp did not envision that anyone would intentionally alienate older employees 12 and force them to quit, but once he figured out what Cornett was up to, he began defending some 13 of these older employees during management meetings

14       25. Kemp asked to train Wells and Pierre, but Cornett refused to allow him to do so.
 15 Kemp spoke with other employees about his concerns and started to learn about the hit list that had 16 been created for employees that were over 40 years old and that were being "targeted" by OCFO 17 management.

18       26. Kemp challenged comments that were made unfairly about older employees and 19 addressed the inequities in the feedback and criticism that was being made about Wells, Pierre, and 20 others.

21       27. At one point, following one of the meetings where Kemp defended an employee that 22 was on the OFCO hit list, and spoke critically about one of the favored employees, Cornett warned 23 him about speaking badly of favored employees and being so defensive on behalf of targeted 24 employees. On a different occasion, an OCFO manager suggested to Kemp that he should not 25 forget about the ways in which OCFO management chastises and targets people that do not go 26 along with the program.

27       28. Kemp was well-aware of the methods and tactics employed by the Lab's upper 28 management once on the hit list. But Kemp was not deterred. He continued to speak up about his

1 concerns and speak with other Lab employees about his observations.

2       29. Not surprisingly, Kemp soon realized that because of his actions on behalf of 3 targeted employees, he had become a target as well. He experienced the evil looks, cold shoulder, 4 and an overall icy environment because of the way Cornett and the other OCFO managers reacted 5 to his presence.

6       30. They stopped accepting his feedback, they stopped coming to his office to speak 7 with him, they stopped seeking his opinion, they had meetings without him, and they made him 8 feel unwanted and like he was no longer a part of the management team.

9       31. Kemp saw the writing on the wall and he was starting to experience severe 10 dissatisfaction and sadness at work. The environment weighed heavily on him and he began to 11 experience sleeplessness and anxiety because of how he was being treated and what he knew was 12 happening to innocent longtime Lab employees.

13       32. Kemp's anxiety increased significantly, and he could not continue to allow OCFO 14 management to mistreat him for speaking up, and mistreat Lab employees that were committed to 15 the Lab's mission and relying on the Lab for their livelihood.

16       33. So Kemp resigned before they could fire him or break him, and he "blew the 17 whistle" by writing emails to some employees on the OCFO hit list and to the Lab's whistleblower 18 hotline.

19       34. In his emails, Kemp explained that:

- 20           • Managers inequitably distributed work and overloaded targeted employees with work so that they made mistakes and could then be written up;
- 21           • Managers commented that "it is hard to get an employee out of the lab, especially if they are a certain age, so we load them up with work to make it uncomfortable for them to stay.;"
- 22           • He had been told specifically that certain employees were targeted for elimination, and they were not to help them nor train them. He was specifically told to keep his employees from helping/training targeted employees although his employees were allowed to spend huge chunks of time training younger

- 1 and/or newer employees;
- 2 • He presented a quote directly from manager Diane Hutchinson on April 29,
- 3 2014: "we got rid of Terry Pierre, but we still have two more to go, Rainie and
- 4 Lisa." We will just keep dinging them until we can get them out of here. Kemp
- 5 was referring to plaintiffs Lorraine Wells and Lisa Cordova;
- 6 • He presented a quote directly from manager Laura Crosby, a manager to whom
- 7 Diane Hutchinson reports, stating: "We still have to get Rainie out of here, but it
- 8 is difficult as she played the race card. Also her age. We just need to keep
- 9 hitting her performance as it is hard for us to touch her. Lisa Cordova also will
- 10 be hard to get out of here due to her age, so will have to find another way." This
- 11 statement was made around April 2, 2014;
- 12 • He presented another quote from manager Laura Crosby which she made on
- 13 March 4, 2014: "We are going to try and get Rainie and Lisa out of here by
- 14 keeping them on a performance plan, as Becky is going to try and have a layoff
- 15 and if we can keep them on a Performance Plan we can get rid of them and not
- 16 have to deal with a Performance Plan or deal with other issues.";
- 17 • He presented another quote from manager Diane Hutchinson on April 28, 2014:
- 18 "I can't touch Lisa Cordoba due to her age, so to get around it I am going to try
- 19 and move her to the PCard department on the Hill and then maybe she will go";
- 20 • Kemp explained that he asked managers Laura Crosby and Diane Hutchinson
- 21 several times about performance plans and trainings for specific employees, and
- 22 each time they responded that they are just trying to get the employees out. He
- 23 explained that he was directed not to allow Shanna Wells, a stellar employee
- 24 tasked with training others, to train targeted employees, but that Shanna Wells
- 25 provided quite a bit of training to Dan McCloskey and others. Terry Pierre,
- 26 Lorraine Wells, and Lisa Cordoba were singled out and excluded from being
- 27 trained.
- 28 35. He explained that he could state with complete confidence that performance plans

1 were not intended to improve employee performance or used to establish training needs. The only 2 use of the performance plans was to get targeted employees out.

3       36. Plaintiff Wells is one of the employees that Kemp emailed and confessed to before 4 resigning. He also reported these concerns to the Lab's Whistleblower unit, the Department of 5 Energy, and other internal organizations related to the Lab.

6       37. Wells, like several other Plaintiffs, worked in the Procurement division led by 7 Williams and Cornett. Wells is over 40 years old, has 22 years of procurement experience and has 8 worked at the Lab for almost eight years. She reports to Diane Hutchinson, one of Cornett's direct 9 reports. Before working under Williams, Cornett, and Hutchinson, Wells had good performance 10 reviews, she had never been written up or placed on a performance plan, and she was in good 11 standing as a Lab employee. Upon reaching her 10th anniversary, she would be entitled to her 12 previously vested pension, plus 50% of her medical, dental, vision, and life insurance benefits.

13       38. As part of Williams's and Cornett's plan to target Wells for termination or a forced 14 resignation, they overloaded her with work, scrutinized her on a regular basis, criticized her 15 performance, refused to provide her with support or training, and then gave her a poor performance 16 review resulting in her being placed on a performance improvement plan. According to 17 Hutchinson, Wells's direct manager, Wells was to remain on this plan indefinitely!

18       39. Wells complained to Human Resources about the unfair treatment she was 19 experiencing. In July 2013, Wells wrote an 8 page complaint outlining in great detail the 20 disrespect and harassment that Hutchinson subject her to. She explained that Hutchinson harassed 21 her based on age and race and violated Regulations and Procedures Manual Rules 2.01. She 22 explained that she was disciplined for seeking feedback and clarification about certain ambiguities, 23 she described the condescending and demeaning tone in which Hutchinson communicated with 24 her, Wells identified times when Hutchinson ignored her and her accomplishments and minimized 25 her existence, and she explained the unevenness in which Hutchinson criticized her work but 26 ignored similar shortcomings from people more directly responsible for errors.

27       40. In August 2013, Wells submitted another written complaint and explained that 28 "[t]he antagonistic, aggressive and hostile conditions I'm being subjected to in my working

1 environment, as a result of Diane's actions, [they] are impeding my ability to adequately focus and 2 get my work done. It is an intimidating, oppressive atmosphere, for me, that is being generated by 3 my manager." She also explained that Hutchinson was retaliating against her for complaining, and 4 that Hutchinson threatened to discipline her if she asked her questions about her job duties.
 5 Notably, the questions Wells wanted to ask were about the so-called poor performance that led to 6 Wells being placed on a trumped-up performance plan.

7       41.      Wells continued to explain that Hutchinson spoke to her in a condescending tone, 8 made her feel disliked and worthless, nitpicked her work and offered unfair and inconsistent 9 criticism, devalued and sometimes ignored her achievements while openly celebrating and posting
 10 similar achievements of Wells's coworkers, ignores compliments and appreciation about Wells 11 from Wells's customers but exaggerates and chastises Wells about small misunderstandings, and 12 blamed Wells for mistakes that were not caught by people responsible for reviewing and catching 13 mistakes.

14       42.      Wells also explained that she informed Hutchinson of an injury that was causing her 15 severe pain and discomfort. Wells previously informed Hutchinson that her injury and pain 16 impacted her work, the amount of time she needed to complete her work, and that she was 17 significantly limited in her abilities to perform at times when the pain was severe. At no time did 18 Hutchinson offer to accommodate Wells or otherwise initiate a good faith interactive process. Nor 19 did Human Resources respond to this complaint from Wells. Instead, Hutchinson – at the approval 20 of Human Resources – expected Wells to work longer hours and to perform her job duties without 21 any accommodation at all. Accordingly, Hutchinson continued to scrutinize Wells, ding her 22 performance, nitpick her work product, send inaccurate and condescending emails, mischaracterize 23 Wells's performance and circumstances, require her to sit in performance-based meetings on a 24 weekly basis, and continuously hint and suggest that Wells was subject to termination for reasons 25 that did not fairly reflect Wells's performance.

26       43.      Wells did not try to hide the fact that she complained about the way she was being 27 treated. Although she did not have the evidence from Kemp at the time of her initial complaints, 28 she has been consistent in her descriptions of the mistreatment and venom she endured at work.

1       44. Other employees, however, relied heavily on their complaints being confidential.
 2 Lab employees in the procurement department are extremely fearful of retaliation. Many of them 3 would file reports only under the most extreme circumstances. These employees have seen their 4 colleagues pushed out of jobs, fired, and marginalized for filing complaints.

5       45. Their concerns are legitimate. When Lab employees filed complaints with the 6 Inspector General, Neda Bustler and Hahn Kent began questioning people and searching for 7 information that would reveal the names of the employees that complained to the Inspector General 8 so that they could report those names to Williams and her direct reports. In fact, during a staff 9 meeting, Bustler took over a section of that meeting and began to lecture everyone about filing 10 complaints to the Inspector General about the Lab's unlawful conduct. Kemp describes her as 11 asking everyone to tell her the names of the people that were "calling out labor ethics violations to 12 whistleblower programs." Wells was believed to be one of these people.

13       46. Given the behavior of Williams and her regime, it is understandable that these co-14 conspirators would want to sniff-out whistleblowers and scare people against filing reports.

15       47. Notably, however, Williams and Cornett did not need spies to inform them of the 16 names of complaining employees. Human Resources violated employee confidentiality and 17 updated Williams on complaints raised by employees. On one occasion, after Wells complained to 18 Human Resources about the way Hutchinson was mistreating her, Williams responded to Wells's 19 complaint. Human Resources, on the other hand, did not. Instead, Human Resources sent the 20 Complaint to Williams and allowed Williams to dismiss Wells's complaint and defend Hutchinson.
 21 This conduct almost completely chilled any further complaints of other employees once they 22 realized that they had no place to turn for protection or help from the tyranny of Williams and 23 Cornett.

24       48. Surprisingly, after Kemp resigned, "blew the whistle," and told employees about the 25 harassment scheme employed by Williams and Cornett, the Lab purported to conduct an 26 investigation into the allegations of harassment, retaliation and discrimination by hiring an attorney 27 to conduct the investigation. This investigator reviewed documents where Kemp provided great 28 detail – including names and dates – about managers discussing harassing employees and their

1 intent to push them out.

2       49. This investigator confirmed that Mr. Mack resigned from his Lab position because 3 he refused to participate in harassing one of his direct reports.

4       50. The investigator could also confirm that Wells and her former colleague, Terry 5 Pierre, were overloaded with work because they have been disproportionately assigned 6 reimbursements so they would make mistakes and give managers reasons to write them up and 7 provide poor performance evaluations.

8       51. This investigator had proof that Cornett and her minions cheered loudly when 9 Cornett reported they had successfully forced Pierre to quit after being harassed beyond his 10 capacity. She had Wells's complaints about Hutchinson, Williams's unusual response to Wells 11 about Wells's complaint to Human Resources, and she spoke with at least one former procurement 12 manager that confirmed Cornett's spiteful and vindictive behavior, as well her direction to 13 management not to train Wells, Cordova, Pierre, and other employees that fit into the protected 14 classes addressed in this lawsuit.

15       52. This investigator ignored all of this evidence, and accepted the words of Hutchinson 16 and Crosby. Notably, Hutchinson and Crosby are the same two managers that Kemp reported to 17 the Department of Energy ("DOE") as directing a subordinate to falsify documents in response to a 18 DOE audit. Apparently, the Lab could not pass its PERT audit on its merit. So Crosby and 19 Hutchinson bullied a terrified direct report into falsifying records and presenting them to the DOE 20 as if they were true and accurate copies of the responsive documents.

21       53. The investigator ignored all of this evidence and concluded that the allegations of 22 harassment were unfounded. Notably, these types of conclusions at the Lab are quite common 23 when investigators hired by the Lab perform the investigation. The Lab's investigation process 24 serves only the Lab's litigation interests and has historically empowered managers to continue their 25 harassing behavior without any concerns for consequences for their conduct.

26       54. These one-sided investigations also tell employees that it is pointless for them to 27 complain and expect the Lab to take action. Consequently, employees are both deterred and 28 scared. Wells was neither. However, the Lab ultimately terminated Wells without ever fully

1 investigating her complaints or protecting her from ongoing and future discrimination, retaliation, 2 and harassment.

3       55. Consistent with the Lab's message is management's actions following the favorable 4 investigations. Cornett sent an email to rank and file procurement personnel boasting that the 5 investigation concluded that management was not liable for any of its harassing conduct.
 6 Accordingly, Cornett and her co-conspirators picked up where they left off and continued to harass 7 Wells and anyone that stood against them.

8       56. Ronald Harpole was over 40 years old when he began working at the lab on October 9 15, 2012, as a Senior Subcontracts Administrator. Dianne Hutchinson was his manager.

10      57. Mr. Harpole witnessed Gary Mack being harassed by the predominantly female 11 management team (Williams, Cornett, Hutchinson, Crosby, etc.). He also overheard Hutchinson 12 and others state that Rainey Wells, Lisa Cordova, and Terry Pierre were on the hit list and 13 "targeted" during a meeting with managers and supervisors. He also had first hand experience with 14 the wrath of Cornett with respect to people that complained about harassment and mistreatment in 15 the workplace.

16      58. On February 14, 2013, Mr. Harpole performed an assignment with the Real Estate 17 team. Mr. Harpole visited the Richmond office space with Diane Hutchinson. During their visit, 18 Hutchinson received a phone call from Becky Cornett. Hutchinson eyed Mr. Harpole suspiciously 19 while she spoke on the phone. When Hutchinson ended the call she immediately turned to Mr.
 20 Harpole and told him that Becky said for him to "button the top button of his shirt everyday and 21 shut up!" Mr. Harpole felt harassed and intimidated by the comment and literally followed the 22 instruction by keeping his top shirt buttoned while at work.

23      59. In addition to his role on the Real Estate team, Mr. Harpole was responsible for 24 several contracts, his priorities being the Lab Security, Fire Suppression Review, and 25 Transportation. Becky Cornett assigned Mr. Harpole to additional group projects that included 26 reformatting of all Lab documentation and the preparing twenty desktop practice guides. Mr.
 27 Harpole worked more than ten hours a day in the office and two hours in the evening from home to 28 complete his work assignments.

1       60. Mr. Harpole was given a performance review after three months of employment. At 2 that time, Mr. Harpole became aware of his probationary status. The only feedback he received 3 with respect to needing to improve was that he should continue to improve his understanding of the 4 purchase order software, which he subsequently did.

5       61. On March 3, 2013, Mr. Harpole was assigned to a training team along with a 6 supervisor names Colleen Lewis. He participated in the training sessions and completed the 7 training homework. At one point, he made a diagram at the request of the group which Ms.
 8 Jorgenson praised, but which Ms. Lewis rejected without reason. On two separate occasions, Ms.
 9 Lewis called Mr. Harpole out in the meeting in front of his colleagues telling him that he "didn't 10 know what he was talking about" and that he "didn't add value to the team." Mr. Harpole had 11 evidence of his stellar work product and the support of colleagues who considered him to be a 12 knowledgeable contributor to the training group.

13       62. On March 20, 2013, Mr. Harpole went to Hutchinson to formally report Ms. Lewis 14 for the harassment that he experienced in the team meetings and concerns he had about comments
 15 that were made about Ms. Wells, Ms. Cordova, and Mr. Pierre. On April 3, 2013, two weeks 16 before his probationary period was to end, Mr. Harpole was fired.

17       63. Andrea Tung is over 40 years old, and was hired as the Business Assurance 18 Administrator in the Lab procurement department on September 3, 2013. She had five years of 19 prior experience working for the Regents, yet she was required to observe a new six month 20 probationary period when she was hired. When she observed harassment towards Terry Pierre, 21 Lorraine Wells, Lisa Cordova, and others, Ms. Tung commented on these observations to other co-22 workers. It became generally known and understood that Ms. Tung was not on board with the 23 conspiracy by Williams and Cornett with respect to older employees. Consequently, Ms. Tung was 24 given work assignments in addition to her regular workload as a disguised attempt to cause her 25 failure during her probationary period.

26       64. Ms. Tung's outspoken behavior caused her immediate supervisor, Edna Annis, to 27 disregard and ignore Ms. Tung's strong work performance. Annis assigned Ms. Tung increasingly 28 complicated work tasks but did not provide her with additional support or training. Ms. Tung

1 never received any indication, feedback, or notice that she had failed to perform her duties until the 2 final month of her probationary period.

3       65. It wasn't until Ms. Tungs's verbal performance review by Edna Annis on February 4 4, 2014, that Ms. Tung received any negative feedback on her job performance. Annis began to 5 cryptically ask and suggest that Ms. Tung was unhappy and that Ms. Tung may not want to 6 continue at the Lab. Those were not Ms. Tung's thoughts or words. But for some strange reason, 7 Annis began to create that as her storyline with respect to Ms. Tung.

8       66. Ms. Tung knew something was strange about Annis's conduct and the comments she 9 was making. Ms. Tung asked Annis if she was going to still have a job. Annis ignored the 10 question and did not provide a straight answer. On February 18, 2014, Ms. Tung was asked to sign 11 a written copy of her review, but was never provided a copy. On February 25, 2014, Edna Annis 12 informed Ms. Tung that she would not be extended a permanent position.

13       67. Edna Annis's treatment of Andrea Tung is indicative of the managerial practice of 14 mistreating qualified and capable employees. Andrea Tung had over five years vested as a 15 University of California employee prior to her employment at the Lab. Had she obtained 16 permanent employment with the Lab, her pension would have increased. As a probationary 17 employee, she became susceptible to unfair termination because of her outspoken observations of 18 harassment towards other co-workers. Consequently, Andrea Tung became a target of the same 19 conspiracy that she criticized.

20       68. Lisa Cordova is over 40 years old and has been employed at the Lab for almost 28
 21 years. She currently works under Williams and Cornett and was managed by Defendant 22 Hutchinson. In fact, she worked with Ms. Wells. Their offices are across from each other and 23 observed each others working conditions. Ms. Wells and Ms. Cordova often communicated with 24 each other and compared notes about how they were treated at work.

25       69. Ms. Cordova began performing procurement duties in connection with the OCFO 26 before Williams took control of that office. At that time, Jeffrey Fernandez was the CFO, and Gary 27 Mack was Ms. Cordova's supervisor. Ms. Cordova worked under Mr. Mack for almost nine (9) 28 months handling procurement duties and received compliments and positive feedback about her

1 performance. His performance review for Ms. Cordova was that she met expectations

2       70. David Chen became Ms. Cordova's supervisor after Mr. Mack. Mr. Chen evaluated
3 Ms. Cordova's work during that time and provided her with a performance review. He felt that her 4 performance exceeded expectations.

5       71. Laura Crosby became Ms. Cordova's supervisor after Mr. Chen. Ms. Crosby 6 evaluated Ms. Cordova's work during that time period and provided her with a performance review.
7 She felt that Ms. Cordova's performance met expectations.

8       72. Kim Williams became the CFO while Ms. Cordova was supervised by Ms. Crosby.
9 Shortly after Williams took over, Defendant Hutchinson became Ms. Cordova's supervisor. At this 10 time, as described above, Williams and Cornett were decision-makers in the OCFO.

11       73. Shortly after reporting to Hutchinson, Ms. Cordova observed unfair and inequitable 12 treatment from Hutchinson. Hutchinson would not respond to her inquiries, Hutchinson would not 13 provide collegial feedback as a supervisor, Hutchinson often made comments that it was not her 14 job to "train" or give information, and she would essentially remove herself from the environment 15 as a resource to Ms. Cordova and Ms. Wells.

16       74. Hutchinson would then criticize Ms. Cordova's work and scrutinize her performance 17 in a manner that did not fairly reflect the task and circumstances at issue. She would harp on small 18 areas for improvement and completely minimize all of the positive feedback and achievements that 19 had been highlighted by vendors and colleagues. Hutchinson rode Ms. Cordova's back as if Ms.
20 Cordova's performance was limited only to the negative things that Hutchinson chose to focus on.

21       75. Hutchinson started giving Ms. Cordova negative performance reviews. Ms.
22 Cordova had previously received raises while working under Mr. Mack and Mr. Chen. But once 23 Hutchinson became her supervisor, the raises stopped. Ms. Cordova has not received a raise while 24 working under Hutchinson, Cornett and Williams.

25       76. Ms. Cordova began to experience severe emotional distress due to the undue age-26 based harassment. She also experienced actual work-related injuries resulting from a fall at work 27 and the physical performance of her job duties. Accordingly, Ms. Cordova missed work due to 28 doctor's appointments and was perceived as someone that had a disability.

1        77. Williams, Cornett and Hutchinson included Ms. Cordova on the list of those that 2 they would not train. Ms. Cordova continued to receive unfair scrutiny, while younger and less-3 tenured employees were given training and opportunities to improve and advance.

4       78. Brandon Craig (“Mr. Craig”) was the Lead Subcontracts Administrator of the 5 Service Center who witnessed and challenged the unfair treatment experienced by his direct 6 employees Eileen Yokoi (“Yokoi”) and Denny Parra (“Parra”) who were both over 40 years of age.
7 Craig attended various one on one and group meetings with managers where the underlying topics 8 of discussion revolved around how to force older employees to leave and replace them with 9 younger, less expensive workers.

79. Craig was specifically ordered by Colleen Lewis to say and do things to fellow employees that he believed were unfair. Specifically, Craig was asked to require Yokoi to document all of her activities down to the minute for two weeks. Craig was also told not to extend Deborah Haddens' temporary employment contract despite the fact that their group was substantially overworked. Craig considered these activities to be consistent with Cornett's desire to harass older employees into self-imposed resignation.

16        80. Because Craig refused to participate in the harassment of targeted employees as 17 ordered by Colleen Lewis, Craig became a target himself. In fact, following a promotion, Cornett 18 refused to properly classify Craig's position as an F28.2 Lead Manager, for which he would earn 19 more money.

81. Additionally, Craig had raised concerns with Cornett, in confidence, about his 82 observations. Cornett did not keep his complaints confidential. Instead, she shared his concerns 83 with other managers and made it clear that he was no going to go along with their program

23        82.      Craig's opposition to targeting employees rendered him a target as well. Rather 24 than wait for any manufactured pretenses for his termination, Craig chose to resign.
